Charters Family Keystone of Paper

By LEX SCHRAG

In Brampton, the county town of Peel, Alexander F. Campbell started a newspaper 75 years ago. It was called The Conservator, taking the title from its advice to "Conserve the Right, Reform the Wrong." Campbell was ambitious, politically. He ran twice for a seat in the Ontario Legislature and was twice defeated. So he sold the paper to young Sam Charters, who had been apprenticed in his printing shop. Campbell went to Northern Ontario and satisfied his ambitions. He became member for East Algoma.

Sam Charters moved the paper from Brampton's Main St. to Queen St., where it is still located. That was in 1890. He had worked on the Woodstock Sentinel-Review after apprenticeship under Campbell. He had been lured to Woodstock because he was a good lacrosse player.

Under Sam Charters, the paper started out with a staff of three, besides himself. Now The Conservator and the Charters Publishing Co., which grew from it, employs 100 persons, has two printing plants and two sales offices, one of them in Toronto. The company controls five papers in Brampton, the Toronto suburbs and Cuelph.

The Conservator, at one time and another, has been printed with steam, water power, gasoline and electricity as the motivating force. The water power days were annoying. A hydraulic engine took its supply from the town mains. When a railway engine took on water, the pressure dropped so low the press had to be turned over by hand. Now The Conservator comes off a rotary press capable of 20,000 32-page papers an hour.

Sam Charters, too, was politically ambitious. When his paper was running smoothly he sought election to the legislature. Twice defeated, he was successful in 1908, and sat for two terms. For a time he was registrar of his county, then went back into politics. He was elected to Dominion parliament consistently from 1917 to 1935. He was Conservative Whip under Bennett and Meighen. He found time to serve a brief term as mayor of Brampton.

Two of his sons went into the family business. C. V. Charters started as printer's devil in 1906. He, like his dad, was a lacrosse player. But he didn't follow his father into politics. He was, instead, 11 years managing director of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association, and later director of public relations for the Progressive Conservatives.

R. M. Charters, after four and a half years with the signal section of the 45th Battery, in the First World War, joined the firm. He is now vice-president and general manager of the publishing company. Another Sam Charters, grandson of the first, is managing editor after overseas service with the Lorne Scots.

Through the 75 years, the paper's policy hasn't changed. It is pro, rather than con. It is pro-temperance, pro-Conservative. In the days of Sir Adam Beck it was very much pro-Beck. Now, it is pro-conservation, and ardently in favor of diverting the Etobicoke River out of the centre of Brampton, though the river invaded the printing plant only once.

It has survived or absorbed half a dozen other papers that were started in the town, and from a paid circulation of 500, when the first Sam Charters took hold, has achieved a circulation of 3,000.

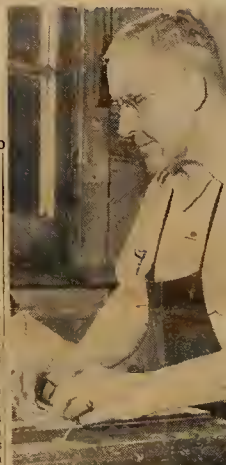

There is a healthy rivalry with the Liberal Journal of the county, the Peel Gazette. The rivalry, in fact, has profited readers of both papers, for, though Brampton has a population of under 7,000, both papers employ staff photographers and reporters. As a result, both papers—The Conservator first—have been rated best papers of their classes in the Dominion.

Original plant was on Main St., Brampton, then was moved to Queen St. End of building to left was sufficient for first plant. Now the firm has two buildings.

Harry Elliott, Composing room foreman, is oldest in point of service. He started as printer's devil in 1902.

Senate Approves Move for Revision Of Constitution

Ottawa, Nov. 9 (CP).—The Senate today approved a government move to give Canada the right to amend the constitution in federal matters.

The resolution passed without a recorded vote after two members of the small Progressive Conservative Opposition voiced their views.

The resolution now goes to the United Kingdom Government. As a resolution, it does not require Royal assent, but will be passed on to the Governor-General for transmission to the King, who will place it before the House of Lords.

Senator John T. Haig, opposition leader in the Upper Chamber, said he would not vote against the move although he felt it was "eyewash."

It would give Canada the right to amend the constitution on matters nobody "cares a rap" about, but on such vital matters as education, the right of two languages, and representation in the Senate, it left the United Kingdom with the final say.

While willing to vote for the resolution, he did not like it, felt it should not be passed, and thought it did not mean anything.

Senator R. B. Horner (PC, Saskatchewan) said he was against giving Canada the right to amend the constitution at this time.

Senator Haig said there had been some suggestion in newspapers that the bill would give the Commons power to abolish the Senate. He thought this was "commas" and that if Canada had the right to amend the constitution the Senate would be in a stronger position than ever.

The real issue constitutionally, he said, was how the constitution was to be amended on matters affecting the provinces.

The Senate was the protector of provincial rights. He was not afraid the Dominion would take power away from the provinces and if it did, the Supreme Court of Canada could always prevent this.

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—Five-year-old Lise Presseau died in Sacred Heart Hospital in Hull 20 minutes after she was struck by a fruit truck late this afternoon. The girl had been crossing the road near her home on Hull's Laval St., when she was hit.

My Loyalists Were Vigorous, Colorful Lot

The legends and stories concerning the earliest settlers in this district are many, for the United Empire Loyalists were as vigorous and adventuresome a group as ever crossed these borders. William Canniff knew many of these original Loyalists personally. Born near the Bay of Quinte nearly a century-and-a-half ago, he was asked in 1861 to write a history of the Bay and its earliest inhabitants.

The resulting "Settlement In Upper Canada," published in 1869, is now so rare as to be considered a collector's item. Among its rambling pages, however, are found many interesting tales of early days.

John Ham, Canniff writes, was founder of the Ham family in Canada. When the American Revolution broke out, he hastened from his home near Albany, New York, to fight the "rebels." In one of the many engagements he was involved in with the enemy, he was wounded in the leg, whereupon, it is related, the ball was cut out and at the request of the suffering hero, was shot back at the foe.

He survived the campaign to settle at Ernestown, where he married and raised no fewer than 10 children, eight of them boys.

Captain Schermerhorn was another of the first settlers in the district. He served with Johnson's famous regiment in the Revolution, after which he drew a lot in Fredericksburgh Township. His death was one of those ironies of life. After having passed unscathed through a rigorous campaign, the gallant captain died on his way to Montreal to collect his army pay. His youngest son, John, settled on Lot 95, in the ninth concession of Ameliasburgh.

Joseph Allison was perhaps the most legendary figure of the district. Born in Haverstraw, New York, he worked in the navy yard in New York City before the outbreak of the Revolution. When war broke out the Allison home was burned and Joseph Allison fled to join the Loyalist cause. At the conclusion of hostilities he came with VanAlstine to Adolphustown, where he drew lot 17 and wed a young Quaker, Mary Richmond. He died at the age of 88, leaving the homestead to his son, Benjamin.

Many stories are related of Joseph Allison's swash-buckling activities during the war. On one occasion, determined to avenge the burning of his home by the Yankees, he and a companion entered a rebel camp under cover of darkness, stole five of the best cavalry horses, and escaped with the outraged enemy in hot pursuit.

His conduct at the Battle of White Plains perhaps best exemplifies his remarkable calm and courage under fire. During this engagement, the story goes, enemy bullets flew so thickly that his canteen belt was cut in two by a ball. There was no hesitation on young Allison's part—"As he could not carry the canteen, he took time to empty the vessel of the rum it contained."

Of such stuff were the heroes made.

WITH CANADIAN FLOTILLA IN KOREAN WATERS

REV. Horatio Todd, Arts '34, Theol. '37, is one of two R.C.N. chaplains with the Canadian flotilla of three destroyers now operating in Korean waters.

Padre Todd joined the Navy in July, 1943. During the war he served on both coasts and spent a period at sea in the frigate Antigonish. He was demobilized in 1946, but re-entered the Navy two years later, serving at Cornwallis and Halifax, Nova Scotia, where his family now lives.

Supplement Features Queen's

FEATURING "Queen's University — 110 Years of Service to Canada Through Education," a twenty-eight page supplement of the Kingston Whig-Standard was recently published. It is the intention of the Endowment Office to send a copy of the supplement to every graduate.

Senior Football Team Wins Two of Three Exhibition Games

THE 1950 version of the Golden Gaels turned in two wins and a loss in three pre-schedule exhibition games this fall. The team showed better early season form than last year.

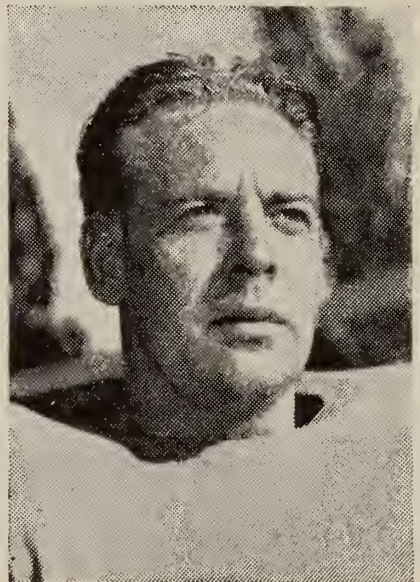

With less than two weeks practice under their belts, the Tricolor went down to a 14-1 defeat at the hands of Balmy Beach of the O.R.F.U. on September 16. Head Coach Frank Tindall did a lot of experimenting and used no fewer than thirty-five players in the work-out. Queen's best effort came in the third quarter when they made four first downs in a row, but the attack petered out with a fumble.

The following week Queen's entertained the Ontario Agricultural College and came out on the long end of a 17 to 5 score. Fumbles played a large part in the final outcome. The Tricolor registered three touchdowns, with Sisson, Bell, and Richardson carrying the ball over the goal-line. The Aggies racked up a major in the second quarter for their only score. The victory proved expensive to the Tricolor with the loss of Hal McCarney through a fractured hand.

In the game in Hamilton against McMaster, to whom they lost last year, the Queen's team showed flashes of their potential power and downed the Marauders 23 to 6 after a spirited struggle. The losers had a 15-14 edge in the first downs but the Tricolor had a big margin in yardage gained. For their efforts the Queen's team were presented with an old-fashioned spittoon, a trophy put up for annual competition in this contest sponsored by the alumni of the two universities.

Queen's speedy backfield, paced by Ross McKelvey, Don Ball, Bill Bell, and Jack Sisson, ripped off many gains against the hard-playing Marauders. Quarterback Moe Richardson showed to good advantage with his passing and ace receiver Tip Logan lived up to his press notices by carrying the ball for two touchdowns.

League Games

Since this issue of the Review went to press, Queen's has won one and lost one. Before a Reunion crowd of 10,000 in the Richardson Stadium on October 7, the Tricolor went down to a 7-1 defeat at the hands of Varsity as they turned in one of their worst league performances in years. The following week in London Queen's redeemed themselves with a convincing 13-7 victory over Western, last year's champions. It was Queen's first win over the Purple and White since 1937.

April 2/75

Dear Dr. Burleigh,

I write to you after having spoken with Mrs. Codare, a researcher here in the city, who suggested you might be able to help me in my search for information of my ancestors.

Our family name is "Charters" and knowing they were originally Huguenots from France, has not helped me greatly, as many of the other Charters families I have contacted know their ancestors came from Ireland.

After searching at the Archives here, which I have just begun, I have found a family who were U. E. L. from New York State and Mrs. Codare was kind enough to tell me that they probably relocated in Ernestown. The family I have always known 17

P.21 lived at Scirotdale, Ontario, that is a hamlet in Minto Township, Wellington County, which used to be called Antwerp. The County
Maps of Wellington show
Henry Charters & Wm. Charter living on farms (one of which is my uncle's today). These maps are dated 1861, but where these people came from, I do not know.

I enclose a record of births
which was contained in a family bible of my aunt's. There is no record unfortunately of where the bible came from or where these children were born.

The Charters at Scirotdale were Methodist, so I have contacted a Mr. H. R. Cartelon in Toronto who has agreed to search in the United Church
Archives for information for me.
Any information you could (over) 16

P.31-provide which might shed some light on the subject would be greatly appreciated.

I am a 31-year-old mother of 3 children and find the time for research very limited, but, this subject is very fascinating and at times rewarding. If you find letter writing difficult, I would be more than happy to drive to Bath during the week or on a Sunday for a conversation about this subject, if this were convenient for you & if you thought it would be worthwhile. I realize that I am not an author of history books, such as Mr. Elinore Reaman, or Mr. Richard Preston, but, I do hope that your interest in history is enough to find my cause worthwhile. I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours truly,
Berla M. Robinson

John M. Johnson,

I shall await your decision
in this matter, and thank you.
P.3) Tickle of information.

Dear Dr. Burleigh;

Feb. 28, 1976

Since my last correspondence of April 15/75, I have tried in vain to get a free day to drive to Bath. With 3 small children to 'board out' and other activities to work around, there has not been a moment to spare.

Whilst recuperating in bed from a bout of flu and chest

P.2] cold this past week, I decided I would write once again to you and ask your consideration.

Would you consider sending me the file on the Charters, upon receipt of my $10⁰⁰ cheque, so that I could read it, copy what was of use to me, and I would return it within a short period of time, specified by you? This would certainly help me out, as I find genealogy fascinating, but very frustrating, when I am not very mobile.

I was able to spend several hours at the Ontario Archives at Christmas when my Mother kept the children and my husband was doing some work in Toronto. As you can appreciate, this is a very tiny amount of time to spend searching, but I was delighted to find a couple of
